Second Quarter 2012

IACVA Update

The International Association of Consultants, Valuators, and Analysts (IACVA) provides a quarterly update. This year has gotten off to a booming start! Switzerland and Austria formalize IACVA chapters, India readies a late-summer launch of CVA training, and Canada builds country-specific law and court training. Up next? It looks like another 3-4 additional European country charters will be established later this year. Stay tuned.

IACVA is continuing to move mountains, although some days it feels like we do it one stone at a time with a trusty wheel barrow. During 2011 we held our annual World Council meeting (gathering of all 9 charter heads).

Our US charter (NACVA) shared how to provide members with value for their membership. Our European charter did the same. Europe is formalizing chapters in Switzerland and Austria during early 2012, and will probably add 3 or four additional country charters during the rest of the year.

In India, CVA training is finally scheduled for August 27, 2012, and may be preceded with a viable on-line training series, available in multiple languages. Our Canadian charter is preparing Canadian specific tax and court training that should be ready this fall.

For those of you who like to travel, this year's IACVA (overseas) charters with training conferences include Europe (in Germany), China (Beijing), Taiwan, and possibly Australia. Other great conferences include the Pan Pacific conference this fall in Australia.

See you on the other side!
